Post Story on Cyprus

A State Department spokesman said yesterday that a report which appeared in The Washington Post on Friday about U.S. advance knowledge of Turkey's invasion of Cyprus last July "contains many inaccuracies."

Under a barrage of questions, however, spokesman Paul J. Hare declined to specify any inaccuracies.

"I see no purpose served in rehashing all those issues again," he said. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger "has dealt with most, if not all, these questions" in news conferences at the time, Hare said.

A check of the public records, however, showed no previous discussion by Kissinger of the specific issue in question: That Kissinger "knew that the Turks planned to invade Cyprus in July" and that he angrily rejected a suggestion by Henry J. Tasca, then U.S. ambassador in Athens, to use the U.S. Sixth Fleet to block the invasion.

"I'm not going to discuss the ambassador's recommendations or any other part of that story," the spokesman told reporters who persisted with questions.
