

B: . . . I know they sent me in something that was so dark a picture that nobody could make anything out of it, and that I had seen that picture before, and obviously there's no man over there; that's a lot of foolishness.

A: Uh-huh.

B: It's been examined by Professor Liebeler out in UCLA, a better picture than that. It's---it's a lot of nonsense, that's all. Most of this stuff is.

A: Uh-huh. Now, wait a second. I want to get that reaction on tape, O.K.?

B: No, no, I don't want to talk about it. I can just tell you that the-- somebody sent me a picture two years ago so dark that I was unable to decipher anything out of it, and there's obviously no man in the picture.

A: Well, the copies I saw---the copies I saw of the picture were pretty darn convincing.

B: Ahh!

A: And, uh - - -

B: Oh, Christ! You can imagine anything. Did you ever take the Rorschach Test? You can see all kinds of things in shadows. Hih! Get a good picture of it, and examine it. Uh---Liebeler's put it under a high power (sic) or something. There's no man in there---that's a lot of damn nonsense!

A: Uh-huh.

B: In the first---in the second place---well, there's no use to arguing it, but they've---there---there's more fiction written about this than truth.

A: Well, I don't know--I would like to get some reaction on the record.

B: Well, you got my reaction.

A: Well, I mean for the record, though, uh...

B: (angry) I say it's nonsense, and there's no more picture (sic) in there than anything else, and anybody can see one has got a terrific imagination. They ought to go to a psychiatrist. That's my reaction to it!

A: Hih! (brief laugh)

B: I've seen all the pictures under better circumstances than you have or anybody else, and anybody I say that sees a man in that picture should go to a psychiatrist and take the Rorschach Test, and see what the hell he can get out of these pictures that he sees in those things. Anyway, that's all for me.

A: Bob (O.S.)

B: O.S.

A: That's
