Kohn Pleads Innocent to Intimidation

Metropolitan Crime Commission director Aaron M. Kohn today pleaded innocent to a charge of public intimidation of City Councilman Eddie L. Sapir resulting from a city Council hearing on a controversial bingo ordinance Oct. 3.

Judge Edward A. Haggerty Jr., in whose Criminal District Court Kohn was arraigned, gave attorneys for Kohn until Nov. 15 to file special pleadings in the case.

Kohn's grand jury indictment charges that he committed the public intimidation upon Sapir when he asked the City Council to make inquiry into the possible effect of an alleged relationship between rackets figure Carlos Marcello and Sapir in connection with the latter's position on the proposed charity bingo ordinance.

Kohn was again release under $1,000 bond.
