Even U.S. Rep. Brock Adams, a liberal Democrat, admits Wallace will get "up to 15 per cent" of the vote, but observers say it will run as high as 25 to 30 per cent and some Wallace supporters express confidence he will get more votes than either Hubert Humphrey or opponent nobody's even asking "Who's Jack Metcalf," since that name already has been forgotten in this district.

Republicans feel they have a chance in a few real contests. In the 30th District, around Federal Way, Rep. Norwood Cunningham, Republican, is safe against King Lysen, who has run a long campaign. Lysen teaches at Green River Community College. Rep. Paul Barden, Republican, of Federal Way, has a real battle against former Rep. Georgette Valle, a have miscalculated greatly in reading the moods of Hanoi and Saigon when President Johnson presented his bombing halt peace talks package.

"President Johnson should not have forgotten that face, and whether you keep it or lose it, is a major consideration in this part of the world," said one diplomat in Saigon.

One day after Johnson's announcement, South Vietnam's president Nguyen Van Thieu said his country will not participate Wednesday in Paris talks because the Saigon regime refuses to give any sort of legiti-

SUBPOENA NOT YET SERVED

Tacoma News Tribune 31 Oct 68

There Was Conspiracy, Crisman Believes

By JACK WILKINS

No subpoena from New Orleans has yet been served upon Tacoma's Fred Lee Crisman, he told The News Tribune Saturday. But he said that when it is served, he will be willing to go, provided expenses are paid for himself and his attorney, Robert G. Griffin.

Crisman also said he believes there was a conspiracy behind the assassination of John F. Kennedy but that he does not know who conspired and that he had nothing whatsoever to do with it.

The subpoena, issued by a New Orleans grand jury, is in connection with an investigation of the assassination.

He said Saturday that in his opinion New Orleans Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison, who is in charge of an investigation of the assassination, believes that money raised by anti-Castro groups was diverted to finance the assassination.

Met Him Later

Crisman said he has been associated with Thomas Edward Beckham, who was a disc jockey in New Orleans under the name "Mark Evans." Crisman said Beckham was a "banker" for the "Cuban freedom fighters" and that Garrison probably has arrived at the erroneous conclusion that Crisman knows something of importance about Beckham.

"But I met him after all this had taken place," Crisman told The News Tribune. "I met him here in the Northwest."

Crisman said he does believe there was a conspiracy behind the assassination.

"Lee Harvey Oswald obviously had a part in the conspiracy," he said, "but there must have been much more to it. Anyone with military training knows that from a bolt-action rifle, that many shots could not have been fired into that small a target, which was moving along a curve, in a 15-mile-a-hour wind, with the shots coming from six stories high. At least, it couldn't have been done with only the amount of practice that Oswald was supposed to have had."

Beckham was subpoenaed by Garrison last December, along with Eugene Hall, of Kernville, Calif.

Theorizing about Garrison's reasons for issuing the subpoena, Crisman said:

"Before the Bay of Pigs disaster and the missile crisis, the Cuban refugees in Florida and Louisiana were regarded as heroes. Lots of big private money came in to support the training and equipping of forces in Central America for an anti-Castro invasion.

"Beckham (or Evans) was a very successful New Orleans disc jockey at the time. He was brought into some of the fundraising parties for the freedom fighters . . .

Look for Money

"Then came the Bay of Pigs. No one was interested in another invasion, and everyone started looking for the money that had been raised. The CIA had charged the refugees for the training given them, but this did not account for all of the money.

"The FBI and Treasury agents began looking for Beckham, who had been 'banker' for the freedom fighters. He stopped at Dallas and then in Jacksonville. At Jacksonville, he turned over $30,000 to the FBI — but I understand that Garrison feels he dropped off 10 times that amount in Dallas, and that the money was used to finance the assassination."

Crisman said that subsequently he met Beckham in the Pacific Northwest and traveled to New Orleans and other eastern cities with him to help promote records.

Super - Spy

"Perhaps Garrison feels that some of the money is buried in the Northwest and that if he gets a lead to it, he will get a lead to the assassination," Crisman commented.

He also said that Garrison pictures him as a "highly paid undercover man, a kind of super-spy engaged in industrial espionage."

He asserted that he is not engaged in any such activity.
