NEW ORLEANS AP - The 14th juror for the Clay Shaw presidential assassination conspiracy trial was seated today completing the jury on the 14th day of trial.

Robert John Brulet, 46, president of a crane service company, was sworn at 11:29 a.m. as the second alternate.

Criminal District Court Judge Edward Haggerty then adjourned court until Thursday. Two motions pending before him will be disposed of at the morning session before Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison steps up to make the opening statement.

Shaw, 55, was charged with conspiring with Lee Harvey Oswald and others in New Orleans to murder President John F. Kennedy - slain in Dallas Nov. 22, 1963.

Garrison's opening statement outlining the extent of the state's case would be the first official word on whether the prosecution intends to limit the trial to the narrow legal issue of conspiracy or delve into the assassination itself.

Judge Haggerty had summoned a fifth special venire of citizens for examination as alternate juror during the trial. More than 1,100 prospects were examined during the 14 days of jury selection.

Shaw trial - 20

NEW ORLEANS AP - Both the prosecution and defense have used all their peremptory challenges and so the Clay Shaw conspiracy trial has now reached the final phase of juror selection.

The first prospect to give acceptable answers to questions relating to the case must be seated, thus completing a Criminal District Court jury of 12 men and two alternatives.

Shaw, 55, was charged with conspiring with Lee Harvey Oswald and others in New Orleans to murder President John F. Kennedy - slain in Dallas Nov. 22, 1963.

Judge Edward A. Haggerty summoned a fifth special venire of citizens for examination as alternate juror during the trial.

The prosecution says it may last six weeks or more. Some 1,100 prospects have been examined during the 14 days of trial.

The 12-man jury was completed Saturday. A first alternate was added Monday. They all watched Tuesday as potential jurors stepped up, one by one, for swift dismissal.

Of 134 men located by process servers for Haggerty's fourth special venire nearly all said they had fixed opinions, family hardship or that long service on a sequestered jury would bring financial disaster.

Just two men told the judge they could be impartial jurors. One survived grilling by state and defense. He gave all the right answers but chief defense lawyer F. Irvin Dymond dismissed him with a peremptory challenge, neither side had a peremptory challenge left.

One result was to force Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison to delay his opening statement at the trial until Thursday.

In Washington, a showdown neared in Garrison's court fight to subpoena the secret autopsy report on President Kennedy for use in the Shaw trial.

The district attorney called the report vital evidence.

The General Sessions Court said the autopsy report would be irrelevant in a trial limited to the narrow issue of conspiracy. So he said that if Garrison wanted the report, he first had to specify whether he intended to link the alleged New Orleans conspiracy to Kennedy's death.

This was a point carefully concealed by the state in its examination of jurors.

Earlier in the Washington hearing, the Garrison aide who argued for the state balked at producing any evidence from the pending Shaw trial to show the autopsy was needed.

Such action would tip the state's hand to Shaw's defense, he said.

In revising his requirement, the judge said he assumed Garrison's opening statement outlining the extent of the state's Shaw case would be made before the deadline today - and thus the issue of tipping the defense would be no problem.

Due to Dymond's peremptory challenge, the trial schedule didn't work out that way.
