Cambodian Orders Inquiry Into Killings

Special to The New York Times

April 16 - A ranking security today that about 1,000 bodies official in Pnompenh said he had floated downstream since was shocked by news that hun-last Monday afternoon. Many dreds of bodies had been seen of the bodies were tied together floating in the Mekong River in groups of up to 10, and many and that he had ordered an also had their hands tied. immediate investigation. He said that no responsible official tween Pnompenh, about 40 and here. had ordered a mass execution. miles upstream, and the point Lieut. Col. Kim Eng Kouroudeth, chief of army intelligence, said that he did not know what had happened, but that he assumed the dead might have been the victims of the wrath of a population aroused by the collusion between Vietnamese residents of Cambodia and the Vietcong and North Vietnamese forces that had invaded Cambodia.

A French Roman Catholic priest in Neak Luong, a town at which the Mekong crosses NEAK, Luong, Cambodia, on the Mekong River, estimated into South Vietnam. No bodies have been seen in the river at the capital and as far downstream at the village of Meat Krasar, eight miles down from Pnompenh. The assumption is, therefore, that the bodies were dumped into the Mekong in the stretch between Meat Krasar

> At a military briefing in Pnompenh today, Maj. Am Rong said that the Government wanted to protect the rights of innocent Vietnamese, but he did not list any security measures that had been taken. The Cambodians and the Vietnamese have been enemies for centuries, and the Camleaders who ousted Prince Norodian Sihanouk as on March 18 have been storing up this emmity.

The New York Times April 17, 1970 KILLINGS IN CAMBODIA: A thousand bodies were said to have floated down Mekong past Neak Luong.