Cambodians and Ally Clash

PNOMPENH, Cambodia, Jan. 31 (AP) — Fighting between South Vietnamese soldiers and their Cambodian allies broke out last night for the second time in 12 hours.

The reason could not be determined.

South Vietnamese marines attacked a Cambodian outpost at Vealthom, seven miles east of Pnompenh, a Cambodian spokesman said. Later, a Vietcong force attacked the same outpost, and the spokesman said he did not know whether the three Cambodians killed and seven wounded were victims of the marines or of the enemy attackers.

Heavy Toll Reported

SAIGON, South Vietnam, Jan. 31—American pilots say they destroyed or damaged nearly 2,000 enemy trucks on the Ho Chi Minh Trail in January, probably the most successful month of air strikes against the trucks on record, according to military sources.

These trucks would represent two-fifths of the entire fleet, estimated at 5,000 mainly Soviet-made vehicles, that have provided the most significant enemy supply line for North Vietnam's war in the South and in Laos and Cambodia.

However, United States officials believe many of the trucks have been replaced, making it difficult to say how much the enemy supply effort has been hampered. New trucks, from the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Poland and China, arrive regularly at Haiphong.

Major Air Strikes

Today marked another day of heavy United States air strikes against the trail network in Laos with an undisclosed number of B-52 bombers each unleashing 30 tons of 500-pound and 750-pound bombs.

The bombers are now flying an average of 1,000 sorties, or bomb loads, a month—an average of over 30 a day—most of them in Laos. The rest are dropped over Cambodia and South Vietnam.

The United States command made no mention today of any B-52 raids over South Vietnam, although such attacks have been reported regularly through yesterday.
