PARIS, April 29—The French Government said today that the people who have been isolated in its Phnom Penh embassy since the Cambodian Communists took over two weeks ago had been ordered expelled "in the worst possible conditions."

There are 610 refugees in the embassy. They are to be sent out by truck to the town of Poipet on the Thailand border, beginning tomorrow.

Foreign Minister Jean Sauvagnargues told newsmen after having conferred with President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing;

"We fear these extremely precarious evacuation conditions will be beyond the strength of some whose health is poor."

"We continue to insist that the plane that we have held in Vientiane for evacuation of the ill be allowed to land in Phnom Penh."

However, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said that so far there has been no response to French protests, addressed to the Cambodian Chief of state, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, in Peking and through the United Nations.

Two Diplomats Included

The expulsion order included two French diplomats who remained in the embassy after France broke relations with the falling Lon Nol government three weeks ago and recognized the Khmer Rouge insurgents. It was on the basis of this recognition that the French advised their citizens that it was all right to remain in Phnom Penh.

"It was negotiated with Prince Sihanouk," the Foreign Ministry spokesman said, "but perhaps he doesn't have the authority to speak for the Khmer Rouge that we thought he had."

The surprise and anger of the French Government at this sudden shift in what Paris had believed was a smooth transfer of relations were barely veiled. Foreign Minister Sauvagnargues said France would continue to make "diplomatic efforts" but that if the situation "is prolonged, we shall take a public position."

There was no information here about what has been going on in Phnom Penh since the insurgents entered the city on April 17.

Representatives of the new Government issued a statement here today saying that "all privileges and diplomatic immunities accorded under accreditation to the previous regime are invalid."

New Accreditation Needed
Ok Sakun, head of the Cambodian delegation, said in a telephone interview that this did not mean a break in the newly established relations with France, but that there would have to be negotiations for a new ambassador.

"Diplomats and journalists who were part of the old teams cannot be accepted," he said.

There was some confusion about details of the expulsion plan. The United Nations representative in Bangkok received the information and the French were given no formal or direct word by the new authorities in Phnom Penh. There has been no radio contact with the French embassy in the Cambodian capital since Saturday.

According to word reaching the French Foreign Ministry, the refugees are to be taken by road to the Thai border, about 250 miles away.

Citizens of some 20 countries, including 5 Americans, are affected. It was not clear, whether Cambodians working for Western news organizations would also be permitted to leave.

There have been almost no supplies of food, water and medicine for the embassy since the refugees entered.

Dysentery Is Feared

Mr. Sauvagnargues said that three days ago a French military physician warned that an immediate evacuation was necessary to avoid an outbreak of dysentery. The French sought permission to take the people out by plane, and the announcement that they were to be expelled was the reply.

"These people," Mr. Sauvagnargues said, "have been badly nourished and are in a deplorable state. The conditions proposed for the evacuation are going to endanger the lives of some of them."

Later, the President's office issued a statement demanding "an end to this situation, which is contrary to human rights."

The statement noted that among the refugees in the embassy compound were "Pakistanis, Indians, East Germans, Russians, and delegations of the Red Cross and the United Nations who were brought there by the new Phnom Penh authorities themselves."

GENEVA, April 29—The International Committee of the Red Cross has two medical teams in Thailand ready to assist the 610 foreigners whom the new Communist officials in Cambodia are expected to expel.

Waldheim Gets Reply

Special to The New York Times

VIENNA, April 29—A United Nations spokesman said here today that the evacuation of refugees from the French embassy in Phnom Penh would begin by bus tomorrow.

The spokesman said the information had been received in response to appeals by Secretary of State Waldheim yesterday to Prince Norodom Sihanouk in Peking and the new authorities in Phnom Penh. Mr. Waldheim is here as chairman of the Greek-Turkish Cypriote talks.
