

United Press International

At the Front and Back Home

David Douglas Duncan

More than 56,000 Americans died and more than 300,000 were wounded in the eight-year war. G.I.'s knew pain, anguish, fear; the anguish reflected in the face of a medic helping a wounded comrade; the fear in the eyes of a marine under fire at Con Thien. But those who returned knew the joy of reunion with their families, a joy tempered by the memory of their sacrifice.

Associated Press