WASHINGTON, May 4—Administration sources said today that intelligence reports indicated some Cambodian military officers "less than 100—had been executed by the new Government.

An official indicated that the reports were sketchy and said that he could not identify any of the military personnel or the circumstances under which they had been slain.

A White House spokesman said, meanwhile, that he could not confirm a report in the current issue of Time magazine quoting President Ford as informing Republican Congressional leaders of the killings.

"They killed the wives, too," the President said to have told the leaders at a meeting last week. "They said the wives were just the same as the husbands. This is a horrible thing to report to you, but we are certain that our sources are accurate."

Time said 80 Cambodian officers had been executed by the new Government.
