

Reagan on Refugees

Chicago

California's former Governor Ronald Reagan said yesterday if Americans cannot find it in their hearts to help the Vietnamese refugees they should chisel the historic words of welcome off the Statue of Liberty.

"I think the people who are complaining so vociferously must be a minority," Reagan told a news conference. "If we turn those refugees away and can't find it in our hearts to do something, we better chisel off those words from the Statue of Liberty."
