An article in The New York Times yesterday, obtained from The Associated Press, said that Leo Cherne, executive committee chairman of Freedom House, had compared the recent forced evacuation of Cambodian cities with the deaths of nine million people under the Nazis. Mr. Cherne actually compared what he termed the silence surrounding the two situations. The article should also have said that the description of the Cambodian events as "one of the greatest tragedies of modern time" was attributed by Mr. Cherne to The Daily Telegraph of London.
