

Jack Anderson column:

Thieu's Trip—The real reason South Vietnam's deposed President Nguyen Van Thieu has applied for a visa to visit Britain, according to diplomatic sources, is to settle there. He, therefore, has reached an understanding with the British that his six-month visa will be considered "open ended."

He would prefer to live in the United States, but U.S. diplomats have talked him out of it. His arrival, they warned, might touch off demonstrations. So he is now planning to reside in Britain, where his son attends school.

©1975, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.