SACRAMENTO — (AP) — Campus militants are “the Vandals, Visgoths and Huns of the 20th Century,” says Maj. Gen. Glenn C. Ames, commander of the California National Guard.

Ames told a gathering of 1600 law enforcement and military officers last night the militants are “modern-day barbarians” and the current counterparts to “the Brown Shirts and Hitler Youth corps of the early 1930s.”

The two-day Governor's Emergency Planning and Operations Conference ends today at Cal Expo. Working sessions have been held in secret, with the public and press barred.

An “unchecked upsurge of crime” is creating “a fortress existence for many families, many business firms, in urban areas, Ames said. He added there is a “growing animosity toward police, and the willingness to take them on” with dissidents “increasingly prepared to fight constituted authority in the streets.”
