

Antiwar Performers to Sue For U.S. Support of Show

A troupe of antiwar performers who were refused permission by the army to stage their show at Fort Bragg, N. C., said yesterday that it would file suit against the Pentagon in Washington this week.

The performers, including Jane Fonda and Peter Boyle, said at a news conference that the suit would seek to force the armed services to allow the show to be put on at any United States military base and to support the show financially.

The show was barred from Fort Bragg by the Army on grounds that it would be detrimental to the morale of men stationed there. It was put on in a Fayetteville coffee house last weekend.
