

Protests - From Campus to Street

Examiner News Services

Demonstrators against the resumption of U.S. bombing of North Vietnam planned to move their protests from college campuses to the streets and public forums today. Antiwar activities, including mass rallies in New York and California, were scheduled in cities across the nation.

While most campuses were quiet yesterday and most antiwar demonstrations peaceful, there were outbreaks and clashes between students and police at five major universities.

Leaders of peace groups had called for a one-day national student strike, but for the most part the call was ignored.

Westmoreland Hit

Columbia was the only university where classes were officially cancelled. The National Student Assn. coordinator of campus strike activities, reported that some students had boycotted classes at 169 colleges and universities.

At El Paso, Tex., a small group of antiwar protesters hit Army Chief of Staff William Westmoreland in the face with a tomato. Three were arrested for disorderly conduct.

The demonstrators also flew an American flag upside down with a Viet Cong flag at the site of an Army Reserve amphibious maneuver.

"It makes no sense for us to be arrested for throwing tomatoes while the general goes scott-free for committing war crimes in Southeast Asia," the arrested three said in a statement.

The three were Daniel Mancillas, 19; Dennis Oney, 23; and Kathy Anderson, 20, all of El Paso.

Eight to 10 young people, several of whom were members of "GIs for Peace," took part.

Hanged in Effigy

At Olympia, Wash., President Nixon was hanged in effigy by students who adorned the likeness with a placard reading, "America, Love It or Leave It."

The hanging took place at the close of a formal program attended by about 500 persons for the dedication of Evergreen State College, Washington's newest and most unusual four-year college.

A small group of students executed the hanging as their part of the "Do it yourself" portion of the ceremony of dedication. Gov. Dan Evans was present and quoted from his remarks to the 1968 Republican National Convention expressing anguish over the war in Indochina and domestic problems.

The college opened last fall and has an enrollment of 1000.

N.Y. to Idaho

At Notre Dame, the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, university president, blamed both North Vietnam — for its "new massive invasion" — and the United States — for "our escalations in response" — for the present problems in Vietnam.

Antiwar protesters in New York planned a mile-long march from the edge of Central Park to Bryant Park in mid-Manhattan for a rally featuring speeches by John Kerry of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War, and Sen. Mike Gravel (D-Alaska).

Three blocks away from the peace rally site, a counter-demonstration is planned by members of the National Renaissance party, which issued a statement opposing "a philosophy of pacifism in the face of determined enemies."

At the University of Maryland, scene of violence Wednesday and Thursday, calm prevailed until late last night when National Guardsmen equipped with rifles and bayonets dispersed a crowd of 100 students who had gathered in front of the main administration building. An hour later, an overnight curfew went into effect.

Fifteen students including the police superintendent's son were arrested at Boise State College in Idaho. Small groups of students took over campus buildings at Princeton University, Boston University, and Colby College in Waterville, Me.
