Protest

Editor — Nancy Reagan deplores the fact that young people do not treasure their freedom enough to fight for it. What does she think the protest marches, the "trashing," unproductive as it is, are all about? These young people are fighting for the right to live their own lives without government snooping; the right to refuse to fight in an immoral war to support an inhuman, corrupt dictator.

I would remind Mrs. Reagan that young people have already died to protest these freedoms — at Orangeburg, at Kent State, at Jackson, Mississippi. In my 80-year-old opinion, if we are to be saved from our sins, these committed young people will save us.
