Student Wounded at Kent State Says One Man Started Shooting

CLEVELAND Nov. 1 (UPI)—
A former Kent State University student who was wounded by Ohio National Guardsmen testified today that a single guardsman fired into a group of students on May 4, 1970, and "within a tenth of a second" a number of other guardsmen turned and fired into the crowd.

Donald Mackenzie, 26 years old, of Millersburg, Pa., testified in United States District Court here in the trial of eight former guardsmen charged in connection with the shootings in which four students were killed and nine others wounded during a demonstration against the expansion of the war in Indochina.

Mr. Mackenzie described the movements of a group of national guard troops who had moved into the vicinity of a pagoda on the campus. It was from this area that shots were fired at students on a roadway and in a parking lot down the hill from the pagoda.

He said under cross-examination that the guardsman who had started the firing shot from the hip and had not put his rifle to his shoulder.

Mr. Mackenzie said he had not heard gunfire from any area of the campus other than that near the pagoda.

He testified that he was struck by a bullet after he began to run when the guardsmen opened fire.
