THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, JUNE 29, 1970

Hatfield Says There May Be No'72 Nixon Slate if

By MARJORIE HUNTER

toward "possible disaster" by critics, young people and the ernor Reagan and the President

By MARJORIE HUNTER seedal is The New York Times WASHINGTON, June 28—Sen-ator Mark O. Hatfield, Republi-can of Oregon, said today that he sconomy improved "there just may not be a Nixon-Agnew ticket in 1972." He said that the Republican-mathing the Ared Marson ticket in 1972." He said that the Republican-south for the Republican-the sconomy improved "there interview on Metromedia radio friends," he said, adding that the vice President was southern strategy, all of this represents a rightward moveend, he continued, "excludes black group perhaps, and labor, and fore as broadly as in today's interview on Metromedia radio southern strategy, all of this represents a rightward moveend, he continued, "excludes black doministration but never be-group perhaps, and labor, and fore as broadly as in today's He accused President Nixon metric aling the Republican group of all kinds." He accused President Nixon spiriting the country through detains trategy all of the present direction: the continued, "excludes the young fore as broadly as in today's metric aling the country through detains trategy all of this represents a rightward moveend, he continued, "excludes the young fore as broadly as in today's fileryiew on Metromedia radio splitting the country through He accused President Nixon splitting the country through He accused President Nixon fartified also ac-cused Vice President Souther appeches assailing war He accused President Nixon fartified also ac-sported Mr. Nixon or President Souther appeches assailing war He accused President Nixon for President Souther appeches assailing war He accused President Nixon for President Southers assailing war He accused President Nixon for President Southers assailing war He accused President Nixon for President Southers assailing war He accused President Nixon for President Southers assailing war He accused President Nixon for President Southers assailing war He accused President Nixon Splitting the country through He accu in 1968. He based his endorsement largely on a belief that Mr. Nixon would be best suited to bring an end to the war in Southeast Asia. Senator Hatfield also sup-ported Mr. Nixon for President in 1960 and made one of the nominating speeches for him at that year's Republican National Convention.

War Goes On