Information Agency Film on Agnew Presents Him

The music becomes tense, and the roar of a jet is spliced in. The drama crests with the first three lines of John Wayne's husky narration:

"His father came to the United States as an immigrant from Greece. His mother was born in the United States. His name—Spiro Agnew." The United States Informa-tion Agency's 15-minute documentary, meant to "introduce the Vice President cinematically to the world," features a split screen, flashbacks, color, actuality, program music and a compilation of Mr. Agnew's attacks on the liberal press and the Eastern establishment. It was shown at a press preview here today.

Criticism Not Shown

While the film, which cost $80,000, acknowledges at one point that Mr. Agnew's voice is "sometimes a voice of controversy," it presents none of the counterattacks made on him by intellectuals, liberals or the Bruce Herschensohn, direc-Bruce Herschensohn, director of motion pictures for U.S.I.A., said that none of the agency's films include that kind of criticism of their subjects. "In the Kennedy film, we said the Bay of Pigs was a setback—that's about all," he explained plained.

Mr. Herschensohn said that in the film—called simply "Agnew" — the Vice President "comes across as a strong man with firm convictions."

with firm convictions."

The movie makes three points at least twice:

¶Mr. Agnew is well-known.
In one scene, Mr. Wayne says,
"The country knew of him now." In another, "He is hardly a stranger to any crowd."

¶Mr. Agnew is against racial discrimination. In one scene, Mr. Wayne says, "Elected to his first public office, he fought for a series of laws against racial discrimination." In another, "Spiro Agnew demands the end of discrimination."

¶Mr. Agnew is forthright. In

of discrimination."

¶Mr. Agnew is forthright. In one scene, Mr. Wayne characterizes Mr. Agnew, when he was Governor of Maryland, as "a man who spoke his mind." In another, he says: "His voice is heard throughout the country—sometimes a voice of controversy—praised by some, denounced by others. But on one point, there is common agreement: He is still a man who speaks his mind."

The film begins with a huge

The film begins with a huge Air Force plane being slowly trundled out of a hangar—and ends with its equally solemn return to the hangar—because the film-makers used the Vice

The state of the s

By ROBERT M. SMITH

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 6—The film starts with a slow pan of an airplane. It looks as if it's going to be a movie about airplanes—one of those shiny documentaries that trace flight backward in color from a sparking jet lumbering out of its hanger to Icarus's wax wings.

President's recent trip to Asia set. "Destination," he intones, "Asia. Eleven nations, 37,000 miles—a journey of friendship." Mr. Wayne, who is known to have conservative political views, received no fee. Mr. lectuals" and on the concentration of the lot on the concentration of the set of have conservative political views, received no fee. Mr. lectuals" and on the concentration of television power "in the hands of a tiny enclosed fraterity of privileged men elected by no one and enjoying a monopoly sanctioned and libert-known heroes in both cowboy and war movies—sets the mood for the film near the out-

TUESDAY, JULY 7, 1970

as Forthright and a Foe

foreign people at American embassies around the world. The —information agency— is prohibited from showing its films or distributing other propaganda material in this country.

Mr. Herschensohn explained that when and where else the film might be hsown would depend on how popular it becomes. It will be shown free. It could also be shown on television.

could also be shown on telesion.

Mr. Herschensohn said that part of the reason the picture cost $80,000 was that fancy op-

23

of Racial Discrimination

tical effects, such as the split- Agnew, the agency said, there screen technique, were used.

The $80,000 contrasts with able, $25,000 spent for the Eisenhower film and $5,000 on the Eisenhower film—in the nature Steinbeck film.

The agency said that the cost of the films should not be compared because a great deal fects were used in the Agnew depended on the amount of flootage already available as opposed to what must be shot for the film. In the case of Mr. world."

was very little footage avail-

It also pointed out that the of an obituary-was done in