AGNEW CONDEMNS REPORT ON UNREST

He Alleges 'Scapegoating'-Says That Nixon 'Cannot Replace Campus Cop' SEP 3 0 1970

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON

Special to The New York Times SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Sept. 29 —Vice President Agnew charged here today that the Presidential Commission on Campus Unrest had indulged in "'scapegoating' of the most irresponsible sort' in saying that only the President could offer the moral leadership needed to reunite the country.

"The United States is not the policeman of the world, and the President cannot replace the campus cop," Mr. Agnew told 1,100 applauding Republicans at a campaign luncheon in the Sioux Falls Arena. His remarks were telecast live in four states.

The Vice President said that the commission's report, issued Saturday in Washington, was "imprecise, contradictory and equivocal," and its recommendations were "sure to be taken as more pablum for the permissivists.

In Washington, meanwhile, Continued on Page 14, Column 3

Continued From Page 1, Col. 2 antisocial conduct is somehow, ex post facto, a cause of that conduct is more of the same five Democrats, signed a letter remorseless nonsense that we to President Nixon stating that the Commission on Campus Unrest "blatantly disregards" the President's efforts and ignored reality in its recommendations.

antisocial conduct is somehow, ex post facto, a cause of that ton for an entire decade. "The commission tells us that many students believe ours is a corrupt, repressive society engaged in an immoral war, but the commission could not muster the moral courage to however, that the report emphasized that "only the President Page 1. The commission tells us that many students believe ours is a corrupt, repressive society engaged in an immoral war, but the commission could not muster the moral courage to however, that the report emphasized that "only the President Page 2. The commission tells us that many students believe ours is a corrupt, repressive society engaged in an immoral war, but the commission could not muster the moral courage to hat the president page 2. The commission tells us that many students believe ours is a corrupt, repressive society engaged in an immoral war, but the commission could not muster the moral courage to have president page 3. The commission tells us that many students believe ours is a corrupt, repressive society engaged in an immoral war, but the commission could not muster the moral courage to however, that the report emphasized that the president page 3. The commission tells us that many students believe ours is a corrupt, repressive society engaged in an immoral war, but the commission could not many the president page 3. The commission tells us that many students believe ours is a corrupt, repressive society engaged in an immoral war, but the commission tells us that many students believe ours is a corrupt, repressive society engaged in an immoral war, but the commission tells us that many students believe ours is a corrupt, repressive society enga dations.

dations.

Before delivering his address, dent can offer the compassion-dent can offer the compassion-ate, reconciling moral leader-ship that can bring the country together again."

He noted, as the commission had, that campus unrest could be traced back to at least four the Federal Government's role in law enforcement was to "set the moral tone."

Phasized that "only the President Called Unfair"

In its call for a figurative "cease-fire" between student dissenters and society, Mr. Agnew said, the commission "assumes a posture of neutrality as between the fireman and the arsonist."

Moral Leadership

President Nixon demonstrated moral leadership—"the likes

Mr. Agnew objected today, however, that the report emphasized that "only the President can offer the compassionate, reconciling moral leader."

engaged in an immoral war, but the commission could not declare the utter falsehood of that particular charge."

In its call for a final country to the commission could not declare the utter falsehood of that particular charge."

the moral tone."

Report Called Unfair

All the same, the thrust of his political speech was that it was unfair of the campus commission—and of news media and academicians who had "truncated and distorted" its report—to ascribe to the President the role of moral leader in calming campus tensions.

The commission unanimously condemned fanatical students, complacent college officials, repressive legal officers and the inflammatory rhetoric of politicians.

"We strongty urge public officials at all levels of government to recognize that their an even hand the disruptions at the doorstep of this President, is scape-goating of the most irresponsible sort," Mr. Agnew said.

He consistently referred to the panel as The "Scranton Commission," a reference to its chairman, William W. Scranton Commission, was reference to its official name, the President Nixon demonstrated moral leadership—"the likes of which this nation has not seen in many a year"—by con tinuing to pursue peace without surrender in Vietnam, the vice President said.

Mr. Nixon also did this, he said, by making "painful" decisions to curb inflation, by "resisting every outside pressure to impose his will on college campuses," by reordering national priorities and by staking his political future on an American combat assault on Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia.

The Vice President Nixon demonstrated moral leadership—"the likes of which this nation has not seen in many a year"—by con tinuing to pursue peace without surrender in Vietnam, the vice President said.

Mr. Nixon also did this, he said, by making "painful" decisions to curb inflation, by "resisting every outside pressure to impose his will on college campuses," by reordering national priorities and by staking his political future on an American combat assault on Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia.

The Vice President Nixon demonstrated moral leadership—"the likes of which this nation has not inverse moral leadership—"the dimonstration of which this nation has not inverse moral leadership—"the likes inflammatory rhetoric of politicians.

"We strongfy urge public officials at all levels of government to recognize that their public statements can either heal or divide," the commission said. "Harsh and bitter rhetoric can set citizen against citizen, exacerbate tension and encourage violence."

Mr. Agnew made it clear that the did not intend to interpret the commission's plea as a compelling argument to tone down his own rhetoric.

"The vice President complained that the report "condemns with an even hand the disruptions by students that have very ity for maintaining academic freedom within a campus community does not belong on the steps of the White House—as some commissioners suggest the danger long ago."

"The vice President complained that the report "condemns with an even hand the disruptions by students that have very ity for maintaining academic freedom within a campus community does not belong on the steps of the White House—as some commissioners suggest the danger long ago."

"The commission," he said, "rebukes those who outspoken and violence, while it exempts for recommending expanded frederal aid to colleges and university administration build-ing and at the door of the faculty lounge."

He chided the commission of those disruptions by academicians and public men who were alert to the danger long ago."

"The vice President complained that the report "condemns with an even hand the disruptions by students that have very ity for maintaining academic freedom within a campus community does not belong on the steps of the White House—lour freedom within a campus community does not belong on the steps of the university administration build- rebukes those who outspoken.

"The vice President complained that the report "condemns with an even hand the disruptions by academicians and public men who were alert to the danger long ago."

"The commission of those disruptions by academicians and public men who were alert to the danger long ago."

"The vice President complained that the report "condemns with an eve suspiciously like a call for a payoff," he said.

"radical liberals" in Congress, whom he blames for fostering whom he blames for iostering, a permissive attitude among the young. He said that Democratic Senator George S. McGovern of South Dakota had a "100 record that was "100 record th voting record that was "100 per cent on the radical-liberal index."

In the text of a speech prepared for delivery tonight at a Republican rally in Minot, N. D., the Vice President also defended anew the Southeast Asian "domino theory" which holds that the loss of South Vietnam to the Communists would imperil a string of neighboring nations. boring nations.