

MANY SOVIET BASES REPORTED IN CUBA

by Theodore A. Ediger

Miami - (CNS) - The mystery of widespread Soviet activity in Cuba remains unsolved, but detailed, circumstantial reports in refugee circles here say only a part of it revolves around Cienfuegos.

The Cienfuegos installation, whatever it amounts to, is only one link in a network of military facilities built in Cuba with Soviet help, whether or not for actual Soviet use.

Cuban exile intelligence sources have been reporting such activity for years, and actually called the shot on [the] base .....

(Story quotes Manolo Reyes - "an exile television commentator with sources in the Cuban underground" - as saying, "There is a permanent Soviet naval squadron in the Caribbean right now," and that "apparently one of the ships in that squadron is a modern submarine.")
