Adviser Runs a Growing Committee Complex

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18-Dr. K., as the White House staff sometimes call Henry A. Kissinger, runs a complex and growing system of com-mittees to manage United States foreign policy.

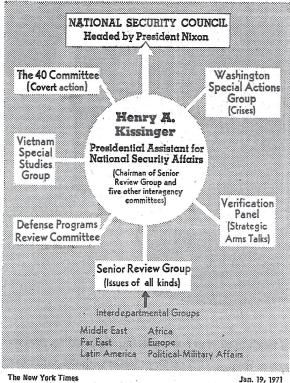

The office of the Presi-dent's principal security ad-viser is preparing to com-puterize contingency plans and other vital information on world trouble spots for push-button recall. That will make the White House oper-ations more self-contained ations more self-contained.

The White House has put on microfilm the literally hundreds of papers that have entered the Kissinger com-mittee system over two years. It takes business machines just to keep track of the flow of paper.

One glance at the budget figures figures shows how much more ambitious Mr. Kissinger's operation is than those of McGeorge Bundy under President Kennedy and Walt W. Rostow under President Johnson.

National The Security Council staff budget this fis-cal year runs $2.2 - million, more than triple Mr. Ros-tow's budget in 1968 and two and a half times Mr. Bundy's in 1962. One large chunk of the increase—near-ly $500,000—is going for outside consultants doing research for Mr. Kissinger.

The heart of the Kissinger. The heart of the Kissinger system is the committee structure, stacked up like the decks of an ocean liner, with the National Security Council on top.

Just before the policy op-tions go before the President, they are rigorously reviewed by one of the first-tier com-mittees, all headed by Mr. Kissinger. Lesser matters are left to a different system — the Under Secretarys Com-mittee, headed by Under Secretary of State John N. Irwin 2d.

The most broad-ranging of the Kissinger committees Presidential memo that es-is the Senior Review Group, tablished it.) to prove to him, to his sat-which deals with issues of The core membership of isfaction, that you've got a all kinds. The others have all the committees is much reasonable case."

specialties: the Vietnam Spe-cial Studies Group, the Veri-fication Panel (strategic arms talks), the Defense Programs Review Committee (military manpower and budgeting), Washington Special Actions Group (for managing crises) and the Forty Committee (for supervising covert intel-ligence operations or parend ligence operations; so named because of the number of the

the same: Under Secretary Irwin or U. Alexis Johnson, Under Secretary for Political Affairs; David Packard, Dep-uty Secretary of Defense; Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Pichard Helms of Staff, and Richard Helms, Director of Central Intelligence. Budget and Atomic Energy Commission officials sit on the defense panel and other agencies take part as needed. On the deck below are six interdepartmental groups set up on a regional basis and headed by an assistant sec-retary of state. Parallel, and often competitive to that, are working groups run by Mr. Kissinger's top staff aides and drawing on the best specialists throughout the Government.

ernment. More than one official has commented that Mr. Kissin-ger, who directs the traffic as well as setting the general intellectual tone of the dis-cussions, can shift the forum if he runs into bureaucratic roadblocks on any issue if he runs into bureaucratic roadblocks on any issue. On crucial issues like the arms talks, Vietnam or de-fense manpower, the work-ing groups headed by Kissin-ger aides do the staff stud-ies on which high-level pol-icy debates are later based. "With that setup," a knowledgeable official com-mented, "Henry has such a hammerlock on foreign pol-icy that you don't get through any options that he doesn't mean he has to That doesn't mean he has to