Law Job for Calley Prosecutor

Aubrey M. Daniel 3d, the Army prosecutor of Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. who criticized President Nixon for having injected himself into the case, will join the Washington law firm of Edward Bennett Williams this summer.

The law firm — Williams, Connolly & Califano — said yesterday that Mr. Daniel, who was separated from the Army as a captain on April 28, was on vacation and would start work on Aug. 1. The 29-year-old lawyer, who had practiced law for only nine months before entering the Army in 1967, successfully prosecuted Lieutenant for the murder of civilians at Mylai, South Vietnam.

When the President said he would personally review the case, the prosecutor wrote him a letter asserting that Mr. Nixon's action had damaged the system of military justice. (FILED 7 APR 71)

It would be "too hard for the voters to sort out their prejudices" if he ran for the Senate, said Representative Robert F. Drinan, the only Roman Catholic priest in Congress. So, Representative Drinan said in a television interview, he will not run next year for the Senate seat held by Edward W. Brooke, Massachusetts Republican and the only Negro in the body. Such a race, Representative Drinan said, would pit, "a Jesuit Democrat against a Black Republican."

President Nixon nominated Ezra Solomon, a professor of finance at Stanford University, for a post on the Council of Economic Advisers. If approved by the Senate, Mr. Solomon will join the council in September. The position pays $38,000 a year.

Bonnie Jo Funderburke will be the only white among 50 finalists this summer in a talent contest being sponsored by Black Shriners. Miss Funderburke, who is 18 years old, said in Charlotte, N. C., that she did not expect to win, but not because of race. "I kind of think they're more likely to pick a singer over a flute-player," she said.

Richard G. Kleindienst, a Deputy Attorney General, appears to be the likeliest successor to Attorney General John N. Mitchell. Mr. Mitchell, who managed President Nixon's campaign in 1968, is widely believed in Washington to be preparing to resign to manage Mr. Nixon's reelection campaign next year.

The head of one of the world's most admired gardens has no time for his own. Jhon Helsop-Harrison, new director of the Royal Botanical Gardens, at Kew, in Surrey, England, said his wife would confirm that "I never have time to pick up a spade."

Automobile exhaust pollution is being curbed so fast, said Lee A. Iacocca, president of the Ford Motor Company, that pollution-hunters may have a hard time finding it in a few years. Mr. Iacocca said in Detroit: "By the middle of this decade, though we aren't sure yet how to do it, we expect that every new car in the United States will be virtually pollution-free. Despite the litany from our critics on safety and emissions, most of the job is already done."

The United States will not file a criminal complaint against Groucho Marx for the statement attributed to him that "the only hope this country has is Nixon's assassination." The comment was published in The Berkeley Barb, an underground newspaper in California. James L. Browning Jr., United States Attorney, said in San Francisco that the remark was not a real threat, "although it comes close."

When there is a need for harder or softer water in Alsace, one person who might be able to help is Garry Davis, the son of Meyer Davis, the orchestra leader and agent for eastern France of Culligan Industrial Water Service. Garry Davis, who declared his world citizenship in 1948 and has had a career confounding immigration officials with his home-made world passport, has settled in the Alsatian city of Mulhouse, where his parents are scheduled to visit him this week. Watching the family music business in New York, his brother, Emery, said, "When he's not making speeches, he's the Culligan man over there. No, I'm not joking. He's the Culligan man for the whole area."
