

Notes on People byline, Albin Krebs

The peripatetic Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's adviser on national security, wowed 1,000 guests at the Washington Press Club's "Night in Peking" dinner. Giving a mock report on preparations for Mr. Nixon's summit meeting in China next month, Mr. Kissinger said that one of the problems he had to deal with was "getting Bebe Rebozo's houseboat up the Yangtze River." After much diplomatic maneuvering, he said, a compromise had been reached on the menu for the official dinner in Peking—"cottage cheese with soy sauce." Addressing himself to Gloria Steinem's frequent disclaimer that she was not one of his past, present or future girl friends, Mr. Kissinger said: "...But I am not discouraged. After all, she did not say if nominated she would not accept, or if elected, she would not serve."
