

Richard Kleindienst, nominated to be Attorney General, testifies at confirmation hearings before Senate Judiciary Committee; says he has reservations about elimination of capital punishment, believes federal legislation to outlaw handguns would be unenforceable, supports use of electronic eavesdropping in national security cases, and believes there should be no distinction between a foreign or domestic threat to the national security, opposes legalization of possession of marijuana

Clippings on above filed separately. Kleindienst/ITT