WASHINGTON, April 26-President Nixon announced tonight that he would withdraw 20.000 more American troops from Vietnam, a move that would reduce authorized American troop strength to 49,000 by July 1.

In the text of his speech prepared for delivery tonight, Mr. Nixon gave a generally optimistic assessment of the military situation in Vietnam, and quoted the American commander in Indochina-Gen. Creighton Abrams-as saying that the South Vietnamese could withstand the enemy offensive if the United States continued to provide air and sea support.

Mr. Nixon said that he would continue air and naval attacks on North Vietnam "until the North Vietnamese stopped their offensive in South Vietnam."

The President sounded yet another optimistic note when he said that the United States would resume the Paris peace sessions tomorrow "with the firm expectation that productive talks leading to rapid progress will follow through all available channels."

The Defense Department volunteered a sanguine assessment of battlefield conditions, while the State Department expressed hopes that Mr. Nixon's decision. to return to the negotiating table in Paris, announced last night at the White House, would lead to fruitful and serious Enemy's Losses Noted

The Pentagon spokesman, Jerry W. Friedheim, said he found cause for cheer in the fact that after four weeks of hard fighting the South Viet-namese had "acquitted themselves wel' under adverse con-

"We are encouraged,' he said, adding that "the enemy has taken very major casualties and is on his way to another set of losses similar to the 1968 Tet offensive."

According to "estimates and approximations," he said, the enemy—the North Vietnamese and the Vietcong—had "suf-fered half or more losses than he suffered in 1968."

At the State Department, meanwhile, officials said the United States had decided to attend the peace talks tomorrow to "explore" the possibility that Hanoi might be prepared to act in a more conciliatory manner.

The State Department officials also hinted broadly that the United States was prepared to resume secret talks with the North Vietnamese in Paris, particularly if Le Duc Tho, a member of the Hanoi Politburo, returned to Paris as expected.

Privately, officials insisted that although there were encouraging signs on the military front, and elements of hope, however slim, on the diplomatic front, Mr. Nixon remained firm in his readiness to invoke particular and since the North Vietnamese crossed through the demilitarized zone into South Vietnam with thousands of troops supported by tanks and other armor.

troops from South Vietnam in June, 1969, with an announcement on Midway Island that 25,000 would come home by Aug. 31. During 1969 and 1970, Americans left Vietnam at an average rate of 10,000 to 12,000 men a month.

The monthly rate accelerated rapidly after Mr. Nixon's sixth withdrawal statement, on Nov. 12, 1971. Under withdrawal timetables announced then and on Jan. 13, 1972—his last statement on troops before tonight—Americans have been leaving Vietnam at a rate of about 123,000 men a month.
