

Bomb Rocks Site in Iran Just Before Visit by Nixon

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE Jr.
Special to The New York Times

TEHERAN, Iran, May 31—Terrorists exploded three bombs here today, one of them near the tomb of the Shah's father, Riza Shah, an hour before President Nixon was scheduled to lay a wreath there. A second went off under a car carrying an American adviser to the Iranian Air Force.

The blast broke both legs of the adviser, Brig. Gen. Harold L. Price, injured his driver and killed an Iranian woman standing nearby.

The third bomb exploded in an alley next to the United States Information Service building, shattering windows. No injuries were reported.

'Small Group' Blamed

Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House press secretary, said this morning: "This is the activity of a very small group that has engaged in terrorist activities in the past. There is no indication whatever that any of the reported incidents were aimed at the well-being of the President of the United States or any members of his party."

However, both American and Iranian security forces said they thought Mr. Nixon might have been in greater danger than he suspected. They speculated that the bomb had been timed to explode when he arrived but had gone off prematurely.

Mr. Nixon was already in his car preparing to drive to the tomb, 20 miles outside the city, when word came of the explosion.

A television crew at the tomb, which was preparing for Mr. Nixon's arrival, said the bomb had gone off 100 feet to the rear of the monument, behind a wall 10 feet high and 3 feet thick. That seemed to indicate that the terrorists had sought merely to frighten the President.

Continued on Page 16, Column 1

Continued From Page 1, Col. 3

The tomb is for Riza Shah, the present Shah's father, and for the Shah's younger brother, who died in an accident. The President drove to the tomb and proceeded with the wreath-laying ceremony after security forces had checked the area.

Local sources said the bombings might have been the work of an urban terrorist movement that is bitterly opposed to what it regards as the Shah's autocratic domestic policies, his friendship with Israel and his pro-western foreign policy. The sources said that five young terrorists were executed last week.

After Mr. Nixon conferred again with the Shah this morning, a communiqué was issued saying they had discussed the Middle East. They expressed gratification over the continued cease-fire but concern that no lasting settlement had been reached.

The communiqué urged a settlement based on Resolution 242 of the United Nations Security Council, which calls on the Arabs to agree to a permanent peace and on Israel to withdraw from an unspecified amount of occupied territory.

The two leaders expressed hope that India and Pakistan could resolve their differences, and the Shah pledged to halt domestic production of the opium poppy when other middle Eastern nations agreed to do so.

The communiqué did not mention Soviet political and military encroachment in the Persian Gulf. Iran is the dominant sea power in the gulf now that Britain has withdrawn but feels threatened by the Soviet Navy's advances and by Moscow's growing ties with Iraq, Iran's hostile neighbor to the west.

Both men however, spoke of the need for continued "stability and security" in the Persian Gulf, and the President affirmed that the United States "would continue to cooperate with Iran in strengthening its own defense."

Shortly after the communiqué was issued, Mr. Nixon left for Poland, the final stop on his tour before he returned to the United States tomorrow night.

Reporters on board the Spirit of '76, the Presidential jet, joked with Henry A. Kissinger, the President's adviser on national security, about an incident at a party in Teheran last night, at which a 28-year-old belly dancer named Nadia Parsa danced in front of Mr. Kissinger's table and then plopped into his lap.

"She was a charming girl and very interested in foreign policy," Mr. Kissinger said in his deadpan way. "We discussed the conversion tables of the strategic arms limitations agreement."

Mr. Kissinger confirmed reports that the main obstacles to a trade agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union were Moscow's Lend-Lease debt and the high cost of shipping grain in American vessels.

He said he thought preparatory meetings on the reduction of allied and Soviet forces in Europe, as well as talks on setting up a European security conference, would begin in the fall.

SFChronicle

MAY 31 1972

Undulation for Kissinger

Teheran

President Nixon's national security adviser, Henry A. Kissinger, crashed a press party last night and wound up with an exotic belly dancer on his lap as he sat on a Persian pillow on the floor.

After attending a state dinner honoring the President and Mrs. Nixon, Kissinger joined Iranian Prime Minister Emir Abbas Hoveida and Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Sisco for a post-midnight stop at the hotel where the press party already was in full swing.

Nadia Parsa, 23, a Persian wearing a white costume with metal breast plates about the size of a silver dollar, was doing her exotic dance when Kissinger and his party entered in white tie and tails.

Kissinger soon began smoking a three-foot high Persian hookah and became the object of wide attention.

The belly dancer came down the steps from the stage and drifted toward the VIP party, keeping her coal-rimmed eyes on Kissinger.

The music slowed, Miss Parsa moved in more sensual motions and finally sat on Kissinger's lap. The crowd roared.

Kissinger kept a big smile on his face and a steady hand on her waist.

After three minutes she got up, squeezed Kissinger's hand and moved back onto the stage.

Kissinger took three more puffs on his hookah and departed, smiling.

United Press