To the Editor:

Is the real world of President Richard Nixon and the Republican party represented by the picture we saw on television of the thousands of multi-colored balloons descending upon the happy delegates at the Republican National Convention celebrating the nomination of their candidate? Or is it another picture of over 3,550,000 tons of explosives descending upon the people in the lands of Indochina in the three and one-half years of his Administration?

Voters in November should be reminded by the balloons and the bombs of both the frivolity and the tragedy of the Nixon Administration, which speaks of peace and good times while continuing massive destruction in Southeast Asia.
