Nixon May Ease Stand on Cuba

Jack Anderson

AS REPORTED earlier, President Nixon has rejected the idea of including Cuba in his campaign to reduce East-West tensions. This is still the word going out from the White House.

But after the presidential election, we have now learned, he may modify his hard line toward Havana.

The detailed planning has already started for ending the boycott against Cuba and resuming trade relations. The plans won't be implemented until the Organization of American States votes to lift the boycott. But if the United States should reverse its attitude toward Cuba, this could be expected to have enormous influence upon the OAS.

The President is less interested in concessions from Havana than Moscow. During the Moscow Summit bargaining, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko offered mischievously: "We'll throw Cuba in for good measure."

The wisecrack masked genuine Soviet misgivings over Cuba. It's costing the Kremlin more than $2 million a day to keep Fidel Castro in power in Havana.

President Nixon is now willing to restore commercial ties with Cuba in exchange, say, for a softening of the Soviet line in Vietnam.
