Senate Votes to Require Approval of Budget Aides

Move to Seek Confirmation of Director and Deputy Opens New Front in Battle With Nixon Over Spending Policies

NYTimes

FEB

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 - departments that the budget The Senate voted overwhelm- officers should be subject ingly today to require confirma- Senate approval. tion, for the first time, of the Budget in the White House.

Senate thus moved to create Senate," Mr. Ervin asserted. another battleground for the spending request for the fiscal year 1974, which begins next July 1.

The measure must still be about its enactment.

The coalition of 50 Demopeared to have had two dis-tinct motives.

filed by Litton.

Mr. Ash and the deputy di-years ago to provide technical in last Friday. Until now, the advice to the President, had two positions have been apamassed such wide authority pointive, and therefore not sub-

"The C.M.B. director is the director and deputy director of second most powerful official in the Office of Management and the Federal Government and it is essential that he be subject By a vote of 64 to 17, the to the thorough scrutiny of the

A second motive, among a dispute between Congress and minority of the measure's sponthe White House over cuts in sors, was a desire to make the social spending programs in the new budget director, Roy L. current Federal budget and in the Nixon Administration's spending request for the fiscal could be examined.

Last Friday, Senator William Proxmire, Democrat of Wisconsin, accused Mr. Ash of approved by the House of Rep- having been involved in what resentatives, and it faces Mr. Proxmire described as the prospect of a Presidential "wasteful and inefficient" Navy veto. But Senator Sam J. Ervin contracts as president of Litton Jr., Democrat of North Carolina Industries, Inc. Senator Proxwho is the principal sponsor of mire termed it "ironic" that the the bill, said he was optimistic President had named Mr. Ash "to oversee a program to bring efficiency to Government when crats and 14 Republicans who the Navy was disputing some voted for the Senate Bill ap- $160-million in contract claims

Most supporters argued that the budget office, the budget agency, formed 52 Frederic V. Malek, were sworn in left Bridge Victor over Cabinet members and their Continued on Page 18, Column 4

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey Democrat of Minnesota, said the bill was "imperative" because "this Administration, ed that the effect of the bill more than any other, equates budget-making with policy-making."

Effect of the Bill But Senator Griffin contended that the effect of the bill would be to remove Mr. Ash and Mr. Malek from office if they were not confirmed with budget-making with policymaking."

One fiscal conservative, Senator Harry F. Byrd Jr., independent of Virginia, told the Senate that he supported the bill because it had become
"standard operating procedure"
for the budget office to supervise activities of Cabinet members even when those activities had no direct bearing on spending.

The only opposition expressed on the Senate floor to Mr. Malek from office if they were not confirmed within 30 days. He said that, under the constitution, only the President had authority to remove a Government official from office.

Senator Charles H. Percy,
Republican of Illinois, countered
that, in his view, Congress had
the authority to insist that the bill apply to the two officials.
He added that Mr. Ash had told him that he "welcomed the opportunity" to explain his with policyand Mr. Malek from office if they were not confirmed within 30 days. He said that, under the constitution, only the President had authority to remove Senator Charles H. Percy,
Republican of Illinois, countered
that, in his view, Congress had the added that Mr. Ash had told him that he "welcomed the
opportunity" to explain his views in confirmed within 30 days. He said that, under the constitution, only the President had authority to remove
senator Charles H. Percy,
Republican of Illinois, countered
that, in his view, Congress had
the authority to insist that the
bill apply to the two officials.
He added that Mr. Ash had told him that he "welcomed the
opportunity" to explain his

Continued From Page I, Col. 3 Senator Robert P. Griffin of

Continued From Page I, Col. 3

ject to the consent of the Senate.

The effort to require confirmation of the budget officials is closely linked to Congressional complaints over President Nixon's refusal to spend funds appropriated by Congress for a variety of domestic purposes and over the 1974 budget proposal's call to curtail or sharply eliminate many programs that Congress created.

Bill Called 'Imperative'

Bill Called 'Imperative'

Continued From Page I, Col. 3

Senator Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, the Senate minority whip, who said that, while he agreed with the objectives of the bill, he was a "fatal flaw" in it.

The bill stipulates that Mr. Ash and Mr. Malek would be permitted to retain their positions for 30 days after enactment of the measure. During that time, the President would be required to submit their names as nominees for the posts, and the two officials would be subjected to confirmation proceedings. tion proceedings.

Senator Walter Dee Huddleston, Democrat of Kentucky, said in a statement after the vote that White House officials had said Mr. Nixon would veto the bill if the Senate and House approved it. He urged the President to reconsider

Mr. Ervin said House leaders had advised him that there was "strong support" for the bill, but neither he nor Senator Mike Mansfield, the Senate majority leader, voiced confidence that there would be a two-thirds vote in the House necessary to there would be a two-tnirus vote in the House necessary to override a veto.

19 Senators Absent

The Senators Absent
The Senate vote today was three short of a two-thirds majority. At least seven of 19 absent Senators were believed likely to support the measure. All 17 votes against the bill were cast by Republicans. But even such customary Administration supporters as Senators Barry Goldwater of Arizona Barry Goldwater of Arizona and Robert Taft Jr. of Ohio defected from the minority to support the bill.

As adopted by the Senate, the bill contained an amendment, sponsored by the Senate minority whip, Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, to limit the budget officials to a maximum term of four years before facing confirmation proceedings again.

again.

Mr. Byrd introducd another Cabinet officers be required to undergo reconfirmation by the Senate if they are retained from one Administration to the next. At present, department heads are only required to face confirmation hearings when they are first nominated, and they remain in office at the pleasure of the President.