

Kissinger Chats With Tanaka

Tokyo

Henry A. Kissinger yesterday filled in Japan's leaders on his talks in Hanoi and Peking, dined at a geisha house and headed for home to report.

Much interest centered on the talks President Nixon's national security adviser had Saturday in Peking with Chairman Mao Tse-tung. Nothing was made public here on the subject but Mr. Nixon's director of communications, Herbert Klein, indicated an announcement would be made on Kissinger's return to the United States.

Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ohira, who joined Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka for an hour and 40 minutes of talks with Kissinger, said he confided to the Japanese the gist of his talks with Mao. But Ohira said he had been asked not to make any disclosure.

Ohira told newsmen only that the talks covered a wide spectrum of subjects, including Vietnam reconstruction, the international monetary situation and China's relations with the United States and Japan.

Sources close to the American delegation said there had been an important advance in Chinese-American relations. But they cautioned against speculation that it involved anything so major as the establishment of diplomatic relations.

The Japanese welcomed Mr. Nixon's gesture of sending Kissinger to brief them, especially since Tanaka's government has felt ignored by Washington in recent months.
