

Behavior of P.O.W.'s . . . . . and of Others

by S.L.A. Marshall

by Arnold Whitridge

[Article by Whitridge is on amnesty.]

.....

This is a question with which the President has to grapple. Mr. Nixon has never found any difficulty in changing his mind, and no doubt his sober, second thought will suggest to him a compromise. It will be a test of his well-inown flexibility to come up with a compromise that will not strike Senator Kennedy as a pitiless vendetta, or Senator Thurmond as a gratuitous insult to every man in the armed services.

.....