Mr. Shultz served initially as Secretary of Labor, then took over as Director of the Office of Management and Budget on July 21, 1970, and then shifted to the Treasury on June 12, 1972.

to the Treasury on June 12, 1972.

A professional economist—the first ever to serve as Treasury Secretary—Mr. Shultz was dean of the Business School at the University of Chicago when Mr. Nixon summoned him to Washington. He had told some friends that he would like to return to academic life, probably at Chicago, when his period of Federal service ended.

In announcing the resignation, Mr. Warren said that Mr. Shultz would take on some special assignments for the President after he left the Treasury. Between now and early May, he will attend meetings of the Inter-American Development Bank in Chile and the Asian Development Bank in Malaysia.

The press spokesman, using phrases that he said he and Mr. Nixon had worked out, described Mr. Shultz as "a pillar of this Administration and this Government" forfive years. He expressed the President's "enormous respect and affection" from Mr. Shultz. Members of both parties in the Congress from Mr. Shultz. Members of both parties in the Congress echoed Mr. Nixon's words.

Mr. Shultz generally assumed

Mr. Shuitz generally assumed a role that experts regarded as unique in the evolution of eco-nomic policy. In one short period, he briefed the press such disparate subjects as un-employment compensation, trad legislation, devaluation, energy, the budget and minimum wage policy. This illustrated the breadth of his responsibility.

His Philosophy Outlined

His Philosophy Outlined

Mr. Shultz's underlying philosophy about the Government and the economy never deviated during his more than five years of service. That philosophy, in essence, was that the least possible interference by the Government with the work in a the free market would lead to the best results. This applied to price and wage controls collective bargaining, the fixing of exchange rates between the dollar and ofher currencies, regulation in such areas as transporation and energy matters.

Mr. Shultz also became increasingly skeptical of the ability of the Government to solve social problems.

He feels that his worst fears about price and wage controls have been born out, although he showed no sign of disloyalty in enforcing the program when chairman of the Cost of Living Council. The decision for which he has been most criticized was the shift in January, 1973, from Phase 2 to the more permissive Phase 3 of controls.

Mr Simon could be expected, if he succeeded Mr. Shultz, to pursue similar policies.

Meanwhile, Mr. Nixon announced the appointment of David R. MacDonald, a 43-year-old Chicago lawyer, as Assistant Secretary for enforcement, tariff and trade affairs and operations.
