

Notes on People byline, Albin Krebs

When Yekaterina Furtseva, the Soviet Minister of Cultural Affairs, was invited to tea at the White House, she brought along, as a gift for Mrs. Richard M. Nixon, a matreoshka doll, the sort that contains several smaller dolls. She also asked Mrs. Nixon what she would most like to see when she accompanies the President to Moscow in May. Mrs. Nixon had a ready reply: "Swan Lake," danced in the traditional style, not the newer version. Mrs. Furtseva, whose position as the top woman in the Soviet heirarchy entitles her to say such things, told Mrs. Nixon that she thought that could be arranged.
