

From column by Maxine Cheshire (SF Examiner, 11 Mar 73, filed Nix Ad), on "reunion" dinner of reporters who accompanied Nixon to China: "Then Kissinger himself got off a crack about the most powerful of President Nixon's aides. In response to the kidding about his 120-member staff, Kissinger said: 'I haven't had any real problems with them except for selecting their uniforms. The uniforms I had planned for them were pirated by Bob Haldeman for the White House police.'" Haldeman had not been invited to the dinner.
