

How Rebozo

Saved

Nixon's Dog

San Clemente

President Nixon's Irish setter King Timahoe was rescued from near drowning in a marsh during a run with the family last weekend.

The "really exciting episode" was disclosed by Julie Eisenhower in an interview.

King went into marshy area near the beach off the presidential home. "He got tangled up . . . and started to kind of drown," Julie said.

Nixon friend C. G. (Bebe) Rebozo, visiting from Florida, "had to wade in and save him," Julie reported.

Julie said the President gets great pleasure seeing "that dog run and run and run."

Associated Press

---