

Notes on People James F. Clarity

•
How did David Eisenhower, the son-in-law of President and Mrs. Nixon, perform during his summer stint as a weekend sports columnist for The Philadelphia Bulletin? As Mr. Eisenhower prepared to drop the column and enter law school, Herb Stutz, The Bulletin's sports editor, said, "I would say considering his lack of background, he did fairly well. He had some columns that were very, very good. Why don't we just say that we were satisfied."
•