

Nixon Takes Family on A Palm Desert Visit

San Clemente

President Nixon took his family off to Palm Desert yesterday for a visit to the estate owned by Walter Annenberg, U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

In an unexpected departure from his San Clemente compound, the President left his aides and the press corps behind to make the 70-mile helicopter trip.

The President, accompanied by Mrs. Nixon, their daughter, Tricia, and her husband, Edward F. Cox, apparently sought sunny weather after finding mostly cloudy skies since coming to San Clemente Friday.
