Nixon Golfs With His Son-in-Law

San Clemente

President Nixon flew by helicopter to the nearby Camp Pendleton Marine base yesterday to play golf with his son-in-law Edward Cox, a New York lawyer.

It was the second time this week the two have gone golfing. Monday they played the private course on the estate of U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain Walter Annenberg near Palm Springs.

The President's doctor has suggested more exercise, especially since Mr. Nixon suffered from an attack of phlebitis in his left leg.
