

Windows at Stanford Broken In a Vietnam Bombing Protest

STANFORD, Calif., Nov. 24 (AP)—Rock-throwing demonstrators broke 49 windows at Stanford University last night in a protest against the United States bombing of North Vietnam last weekend.

No arrests or injuries were reported.

About 200 persons on the 11,000-student campus attended a peaceful, one-hour rally at which speakers denounced the Indochina war in general and the bombing in particular.

As it was ending about 9 P.M., someone shouted, "Off pig!" and "Trash Aero-Astro!"

A crowd, that witnesses said included former students and junior high school pupils as well as university students then marched to the Aero-Astro Sciences Building.

Someone shouted, "Double time." The crowd broke into a run, and the first rock crashed into a window.

Witnesses said that four plate glass doors were shattered and counted 49 broken windows.

The demonstrators then dispersed. Witnesses said that 100 persons were in the rock-throwing crowd.

The campus police arrived after the damage was done, according to witnesses.

Berkeley Windows Broken

Special to The New York Times

BERKELEY, Calif., Nov. 24—

Windows in three University of California campus buildings were smashed by protesters last night at the conclusion of a "war crimes tribunal" held by campus radicals.

A crowd of 100 persons sought to march on the Berkeley Hills home of Edward Teller, the nuclear physicist who helped to develop the hydrogen bomb.

The police blocked the crowd's access to his house, forcing the protesters to turn back.
