RED CROSS REVIEWS RULES ON WARFARE

KULES UN WAKFAKE GENEVA, Feb. 28 — Repre-sentatives of Red Cross soc-ieties from 40 countries will meet in The Hague tomorrow in the first stage — an attempt to revise the Geneva Conven-tions of warfare. The conventions, signed here in 1949, reflected the views of the victors of World War II and were drafted in the expec-tation that wars would con-tinue to be fought between organized governments follow-ing formal declarations of war. In more recent wars in Asia and Africa, never declared and often represented by one side as civil wars, the International Committee of the Red Cross has had no legal right under the conventions to intervene on behalf of prisoners. The delegates meeting to-morrow will try to decide what improvements in the conven-tions are needed and politically acceptable to governments. In improvements in the conven-tions are needed and politically acceptable to governments. In May, experts from 39 countries will meet here in an attempt to get a clear indication of how far the conventions can be revised. The actual changes will have to be drafted at an-other conference. The 1949 conventions were drafted after two years of negotiations.
