PARIS — (UPI) — Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger flew back to Washington today after four days of secret talks with the North Vietnamese to report on the negotiations — the longest on record.

Kissinger's departure coincided with Communist charges at the weekly session of the semipublic peace talks that the United States is escalating the air war and planning to eliminate political opponents of South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Kissinger smiled broadly as he boarded a plane under a heavy guard at Orly Airfield. He allowed photographers to take pictures but would not reveal the contents of his unprecedented round of private talks with the Hanoi diplomats.

In Washington, presidential news secretary Ronald Ziegler said Kissinger did not meet with the North Vietnamese for a fifth round of talks today, but offered no explanation of why he did not return to Washington late yesterday as planned.

Ziegler said Kissinger will report tonight to Nixon, although he said, Nixon had received 'ongoing' reports from Kissinger while in Paris.

In other developments, the Paris newspaper Le Monde said without indicating its source, that 'according to some indications, the knot of the difficulties seems to have shifted from the political to the military problems.'

"The Americans indeed reportedly showed their readiness to sacrifice Mr. Thieu, against whom anyhow Hanoi is allegedly less hostile than hitherto," Le Monde said. It said the main obstacle was North Vietnam's refusal to evacuate its forces from the south.

Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong foreign minister, complained at today's meeting that 1500 U.S. warplanes and 140 warships are "ceaselessly" bombarding North and South Vietnam, killing large numbers of civilians and razing towns, villages, dikes and schools.

She claimed that 150,000 U.S. and 40,000 South Korean troops remain actively fighting in the war.

Mrs. Binh said:

"The American Air Force even has been dropping in many places insects to ravage crops and cut food resources for the population."

She and Hanoi delegates sharply protested the recent bombing of Hanoi.

She also accused Saigon of working with the U.S. to remove Thieu's opponents.

The U.S. negotiator, William J. Porter, urged the North Vietnamese to agree to withdraw their own troops from the south, charging they had 12 divisions below the Demilitarized Zone.
