

from Jack Anderson Column:

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES

South Vietnam's President Thieu has complained privately over Henry Kissinger's handling of the truce negotiations. Kissinger with his European background doesn't understand how to deal with Asian Communists and, therefore, failed to pin them down on vital details, Thieu has grumbled. State Department experts agree that Kissinger tried to handle too much himself, without the strong support he should have sought from the State Department.