Sweden will ship supplies to North Vietnam next month and part of the shipment "will probably be used to rebuild the bombed Bach Mai Hospital in Hanoi," the Swedish International Aid Agency said yesterday.

In Copenhagen, Denmark, the Social Democratic government of Prime Minister Anker Joergensen announced that it would ask the Danish parliament to grant $700,000 worth of humanitarian relief to North Vietnam.

The Swedish aid agency said a ship would be loaded with medical supplies worth $7 million.

The Swedish government has promised aid worth $32 million to North Vietnam.

Denmark previously had granted $6 million in aid evenly divided among the North Vietnamese, Viet Cong and South Vietnamese.

Joergensen said he was breaking with the principle of even distribution because the U.S. bombing had created "an extraordinary acute" need for aid, particularly in the Hanoi and Haiphong areas. Associated Press
