

Battle Flag Furled

U.S. Army's Last Day in Vietnam

Saigon

With a blare of Oriental fanfare from a borrowed brass band, the U.S. Army, Vietnam, furled the battle flags of America's longest war and quietly closed its Indochina operations yesterday.

When Major General Morgan G. Roseborough, its last commander, personally furled the Army's blue battle flag with the command's red, blue and yellow sword crest, USARV [U.S. Army, Vietnam?] was reduced to fewer than 4500 men.
