Most Authors Were Given A Promise of Anonymity

By NEIL SHEEHAN

The majority of the approxi-janonymity, only a relatively mately 36 authors who wrote small number of authors' names the narrative-analysis sections have so far emerged. These inof the Pentagon papers were ca-clude:

reer military and civilian officials who were promised of policy planning in the office anonymity when they were re- of the Assistant Secretary of cruited for the project, accord-Defense for International Secuing to former Government of- rity Affairs at the Pentagon, ficials.

NYTimes

promise of anonymity was given ington. Mr. Gelb was the overto enable the authors to make all coordinator of the project, judgments later affect their authorities.

Leslie Gelb, the former head who is now a fellow at the These sources said that the Brookings Institution in Wash-candid judgments in the docu- a task he was assigned by Mr. mentary histories they were McNamara in the summer of writing and not to have these 1967 at the outset of the study. Col. Paul F. Gorman, now careers by displeasing higher commanding a brigade of the

JUN 1 8 1971

Because of the promise of Continued on Page 15, Column 6

Continued From Page 1, Col. 7

101st Airborne Division in Vietnam, who was assigned to Washington at the time of the study. Colonel Gorman is reported to be under consideration for promotion to brigadier general.

Richard Moorstein, a former staff member of the Pentagon's Office of International Security Affairs, who is now with the Rand Corporation, a Government-funded research institute.

Richard Holbrooke, a career foreign service officer who was an assistant to Under Secretary of State Nicholas deB. Katzenbach at the time the study was conducted. He is now chief of the Peace Corps in Morocco.

Melvia Gurtev, a historian and staff member of the Rand Corporation, and one of the group of such defense-oriented intellectuals from Rand and other Government-financed research institutes who partici-pated in the study with career Government officials.

Daniel Ellsberg, a former Rand member who served as assistant for pacification to the Deputy United States Ambassador in Saigon in 1966 and 1967 and who is now a research fellow at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Hans Heymann, an economist for the Rand Corporation who headed a study for the United States in 1958 on Soviet air power

An indication of the caliber: of the men sought is that an attempt was made to recruit Brig. Gen. Alexander Haig, then a colonel. General Haig is currently deputy to Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's special assistant for national security affairs.

Some of the authors are known to have become disillusioned with American strategy in Vietnam in late 1967, after in January and February of 1968.

Vietnam policy within the John- of the judgments made. Johnson announced his decision wars in Vietnam in early 1965 and retire from office.

participants state that no attempt was made to ascertain known. It is noticeably blander their views when they were re- in tone than the studies that cruited.

The qualifications sought, analyze the documents sound-also structured that way, parly. An effort was also made ticipants said. to have them support any judg- Both the research and writ- own.

the study had begun, and even ments made within the narra- ing of some of the individual more so after the enemy's Lu-tive analyses with adequate chapters was done by two or material from the source docu- more authors. The study as a ments themselves.

The Tet offensive created The analyses, however, vary quality with no general theme general disillusionment with considerably in the sharpness throughout. The judgments in son Administration, and on The studies on the first one section are not necessarily March 31 of that year President phases of the air and ground developed in succeeding ones. to seek a negotiated settlement have a distinctly more critical of fragmentation, participants and retire from office. The private attitudes toward the war of the majority of the uthous of the majority of the dent itself in August of 1964. authors at the time the study This study is reported to parent as it developed and the was conducted in 1967 and have been written by an Air participants realized the volu-1968 is unknown, however, and Force colonel then working at minous documentation that Rand whose name is still un- would have to be analysed. in tone than the studies that follow it.

Because the study was meant grew. Careful coordination bethese sources say, were ex- to be an anonymous bureau- tween various sections became perience in government and cratic history written only for very difficult to achieve and sufficient academic qualifica- the highest decision-makers thus individual authors and thus individual authors and sub terms of authors ware left whole thus has a fragmented one section are not necessarily

Another reason for this sense said, was that the magnitude of the study only became ap-

Thus more authors had to be recruited as the work load sub-teams of authors were left more or less to work on their