NEXT STEP TODAY

Gurfein Decision Due Before the Expiration of Curb at 1 P.M.

Excerpts from the arguments and an affidavit, Page 10.

By FRED P. GRAHAM

Federal District Judge Murray I. Gurfein refused yesterday to permit The New York Times to resume publication immediately of its material from a secret Pentagon study on Vietnam although The Washington Post began publishing a series of articles based on the study in its Friday issue.

In Washington, a Government move for a court order to halt The Post's series was rejected by a Federal District Judge.

Alexander M. Bickel, a lawyer for The Times, told the court here that "the readers of The New York Times alone in this country are deprived of this story." He insisted that the temporary restraining order imposed on Tuesday be lifted so that The Times could resume publication.

Wide Distribution Noted

The Washington Post article was distributed by The Washington Post-Los Angeles Times News Service, which has 345 publications as clients, and was also described at length in dispatches by The Associated Press and United Press International, which reach almost all the daily newspapers in the country as well as radio and television stations.

Judge Gurfein declined to act on the motion after the Federal Government gave assurances in open court that legal action would also be taken against The Washington Post if necessary to prevent further publication. Within hours Justice Department lawyers moved in Federal District Court in Washington to enjoin The Post.

The restraining order against The Times is scheduled to expire at 1 P.M. today, which would free the newspaper to put the next installment in the series in Sunday's issue. Before the deadline Judge Gurfein is expected to hand down his decision on the Justice Department's action to enjoin The Times indefinitely.

The Times published the first three installments on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, at which time the temporary order halted publication. The articles and documents printed covered events surrounding the Tonkin Gulf incident in 1964, the decision to bomb North Vietnam and the first use of American soldiers in ground combat in South Vietnam.

The effort by The Times to

Continued on Page 11, Column 5

MT 6-19-71

Judge Refuses to Let Times Resume Its Series at Once came at the beginning of a daylong series of open and secret forbids either the Executive hearings. The Government in-branch or the courts to use sisted on secret "in camera" "national security" grounds to testimony by three Washington prevent the news media from officials on the ground that publishing any article except in they would explain how fur-such extreme situations as ther publication could damage threatened publication of troop national interests and that movements or battle plans in open testimony would itself wartime.

Times had violated United administered to avoid abuses. States law and Presidential orders by illegally "declassify-ernment's security classifica- to see it. tion system was a sham which documents

In any event, The Times

In open arguments earlier, in testimony by the Government's In open arguments earner, in testimony by the Government's a courtroom jammed with appointment witnesses, an attempt was proximately double its capacity, witnesses, an attempt was made to show that the system that Community of Classifying documents "top the United States Attorney here, told the Court that The or "restricted" was carefully here, told the Violated United administered to avoid abuses.

'Entwined' Information

jeopardized our international several occasions to see if it been published," he asserted. should be declassified because were considered the "universe"

practical to declassify certain putes such as the spreading nonsensitive portions, he said, legal confrontation over the because the information was Pentagon study could be avoid-'entwined."

"entwined."
William B. Macomber, Deputy
Under Secretary of State in charge of administration, testified that the three articles alTablished by The Times ed II Journalists would sensitive articles with the Government "from a security point of view" before publication.

"It seems to me that a free and independent press ought to ready published by The Times had damaged the United States' international relations. "It is me that a lite and independent press ought to be willing to sit down with the Department of Justice," he said, and the constitution of the said, and the said of the said of the said of the said of the said, and the said of t that communications will ap-

The Vice Chief of Naval Operations, Vice Adm. Francis J. Blouin, testified that "it would the suggestion was "utterly inorders by illegally "declassifying" top secret documents by publishing them. That, he said, Assistant Secretary of Defense has "compromised our current for Internal Security Affairs, military and defense plans and intelligence operations and has pentagon study on Vietnam on the articles that have already leonardized our international several occasions to a consistent with the suggestion was "utterly indocuments in the 7,000-page pentagon archive. "Any intelligence organization would depress or censorship by the press or censorship by governing the articles that have already leonardized our international several occasions to a consistent with the suggestion was "utterly indocuments in the 7,000-page pentagon archive. "Any intelligence organization would depress or censorship by the press or censorship by governing the articles that have already leonardized our international several occasions to a consistent with the suggestion was "utterly indocuments in the 7,000-page pentagon archive. "Any intelligence organization would depress or censorship by the press or censorship by the pression was "utterly indocuments." He said it would lead to self-censorship by the press or censorship by the press or censorship by the pression was "utterly indocuments." He suggestion was "utterly indocuments in the 7,000-page pentagon archive. "Any intelligence organization would depress or censorship by the pression was "utterly indocuments." He said it would lead to self-censorship by the pression was "utterly indocuments." He said it would lead to self-censorship by the pression was "utterly indocuments." He said it would be a disaster. The would be a disaster to publish all the documents in the 7,000-page pentagon archive. "Any intelligence organization would depress the pression was "utterly indocuments." He said it would be a disaster. The would be a disaster to publish all the documents in the 7,000-page pentagon archive. The pression was "utterly

The Times, in a legal brief Senator J. W. Fulbright, chair-ness, George MacLain, holds position of The Times position The Government's final witand affidavits filed last last man of the Senate Foreign Re-the title of director of the Semight, asserted that the Gov-lations Committee, had asked curity Classification Manage-Mr. Doolin said that his staff the Assistant Secretary of Deoverclassified and security interests affected by explained the intricate proof fense for Administration. He that officials used to hide em-the entire 47-volume study and cedures by which documents Augustus McKnight, president become classified and, in some cases, lose their classified status years later.

The major answer by The Times came in an affidavit by and the head of its Washington bureau, who called the Government's view of secrecy "antiquated, quaint and romantic." In practice, he said, it serves to mask a "traffic in secrets" in which officials peddle "secret" information for their own ends McGregor Burns, Pulitzer-prize tem was supported by affida- History at Princeton University; vits from journalists from The Barbara W. Tuchman, Pulitzerwhich included stacks of clip-Sheehan and Hedrick Smith, pings of articles based on class-who are co-defendants in the the Judge referred repeatedly The Times.

Affidavits From Newsmen

Continued From Page 1, Col. 8 barrassing information while concluded that it could not be to the duty of a "patriotic declassified. It would be im-press" and suggested that dis-absolutely essential to the con"and as a matter of simple paduct of diplomacy that govern-triotism determine whether the ments be able to deal in confidence," he said, without fear [classified documents] is or is not dangerous to the national security.'

Mr. Bickel, who is a professor of law at Yale, replied that were filed by Theodore C. ment Division in the office of special counsel to President John F. Kennedy; Sanford Cobb, president of the Association of of the American Society of Newspaper Editors; Adrian S. Fisher, former deputy director of the United States Arms Con-Max Frankel, the Washington and dean of the Georgetown University Law Center; Francis T. P. Plimpton, former Ambassador and Deputy United States permanent representative at the United Nations and a former president of the Bar Association of New York City; James and journalists publish it in winning presidential biogra-wholesale amounts. winning presidential biogra-pher and historian; Eric F. Goldman, former special consultant to President Johnson That view of the secrecy sys- and now Rollins Professor of Times and other publications, prize winning historian; Neil ified information or documents. suit, and four other reporters During the morning session of the Washington bureau of

Other Affidavits Filed