COURTS DIFFER ON VIETNAM PAPERS; THE TIMES SERIES IS STILL HELD UP, WASHINGTON POST ESCAPES A BAN

U.S. APPEALS CASE

District Judge Rules No Prior Restraint Can Be Imposed

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 18—A Federal District judge authorized The Washington Post tonight to continue publication of classified information in a series of articles on the history of America's involvement in Vietnam.

The Department of Justice sought to appeal the ruling of District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell at once in the Court of Appeals.

The first of the articles, based on the Pentagon report on the United States involvement in Vietnam, appeared in today's issue of The Post.

Judge Gesell said it was unfortunate that The Post refused to cooperate with the Government's request for a voluntary postponement of the series while the constitutional issue was argued in court.

Prior Restraint Rejected

But he said that the Government had no right to seek prior restraint of The Post's articles and that its only recourse was to bring criminal action against those it might accuse of violating security regulations after publication of the material.

The ruling came within an hour of the 9 P.M. deadline The Post's editors had set for publication of the second installment in its series.

"We're going, boy, we're going," said Benjamin C. Bradlee, the executive editor, when he learned of the decision.

Judge Gesell's decision was bound to have a major impact on the proceedings in New York, where The New York Times is under a temporary restraining order of another Federal judge barring publication of the Vietnam study material until 1 P.M. tomorrow.

The Government moved to halt The Post's series as it had acted against The Times articles three days ago, after The

Continued on Page 11, Column 4

U.S. FAILS TO STOP WASHINGTON POST

Continued From Page 1, Col. 5

Post refused today to stop publication of the articles voluntarily.

In a key paragraph in his ruling, Judge Gesell declared:

"What is presented is a raw question of preserving the freedom of the press as it confronts the efforts of the Government to impose a prior restraint on publication of essentially historical data. The information unquestionably will be embarrassing to the United States, but there is no possible way after the most full and careful hearing that a court would be able to determine the implications of publication on the conduct of Government affairs or to weigh these implications against the effects of with-holding information from the

Times Proceedings Cited

Judge Gesell said that the Government's determination, announced earlier in court, to proceed against The Post regardless of the outcome of the case against The Times, to gether with The Post's stated determination to publish the material tonight, required that he act.

He warned, at the same time, that the newspaper had placed itself "in serious jeopardy of criminal prosecution" by making the material public.

In an earlier hearing on the Government's request, Judge Gisell had said that The Post would not agree to his request for a delay over the weekend to weigh carefully the issue of prior restraint of a free press.

Roger A. Clark, the attorney for The Washington Post Company, insisted that the court would be "treading on dangerous ground if it tries to determine what is news." against the use of material from morning." the documents, asserting that to Asked what position the Jus-that The Post, in printing the of the massive Pentagon study publication of the information material, was taking the position that its judgment was su-Government was not seeking About half-a-de perior to that of the Government. "Their judgment cannot post but to secure the return assigned to the study of the prevail over the judgment of the secret documents that the Secretary of Defense," Mr. the newspaper had "in unlawful under Chalmers M. Roberts. Maroney said.

History has shown that in-the Post articles and its earlier comed the court challenge on the issue of prior restraint of York Times was argued in the free press.

courtroom tonight.

principle of comity—courtesy as between equal—should apply and that has been equal to the equal to ply and that he believed The and more important than ever. Post would suffer no irreparable injury if it were delayed Government would be faced in publication while the Times was under a restrainting order. He said that to deny the Gov-gaining access to the docuernment's request for a similar ments. order against The Post would be to decide the case in New York, because The Times could then argue that it had been two days—after it was in opinion, does not reveal information, which could be used to damaged by the restraint.

Mr. Clark contended that perthem available to others.

whether the Government knew to the method of their receipt this morning after-to the surf any publications other than in the article this morning. The Times and The Post had The article did not appear in peared in the late editions.

sought a temporary restraining tion, Mr. Maroney said he had Post. Mr. Bradlee said that was order against continuation of the series, which began in this morning's issues of the paper but to see it in The Post this lawyers. Other employes said and a permanent injunction us to see it in The Post this lawyers. Other employes said continue the articles would tice Department might take if cause "irreparable injury" to The Times were permitted to the national security of the publish its articles tomorrow, in its early editions, available United States.

Wr. Maroney said the case at 10:30 o'clock last night, the Against The Post would consists at attorney general, tinue because different publications might print different parts been alerted to seek to halt the that The Post in printing the loft the massive Pentagon study.

possession.

The Post's executive editor. formation of this sort cannot Benjamin C. Bradlee, had vowed be suppressed, Mr. Clark argued
If the Post were restrained he continued, "the irreparable plants of the post with the property of the post were restrained because the continued, the irreparable plants of the post with the post of the Earlier Mr. Bradlee said in The relationship between the Government's action against Government's Gover

"It seems to me that they've ourtroom tonight.

"It seems to me that they've restraining it from continuing got two people to tangle with with its account of the docu-

He said that it was likely the

"It's sure to show up some-where else," Mr. Bradlee said. "What did it take us to get it sons who had made the sensi-have received copies of some or to the advantage of any tive documents available to the of the Pentagon study docu-foreign nation. two newspapers out of a "moral ments through the mail on fervor" were likely to make Monday and to have obtained post staff were delighted that another group of the Pentagon their newspaper had proceeded Obviously there has been "a papers later this week. The from where The Times, under leak in the dike" that cannot be newspaper's editors would not court order, had left off. Several plugged, The Post's lawyer said. disclose the source of their of the writers said that they When Judge Gesell asked documents, nor did they allude had toasted the first installment

Justice Department obtained access to the informa-the first two editions of The that The Post had also taken into account the possibility that if the article had appeared

About half-a-dozen Post re-

Other reporters working on the material included Murray Marder, Marilyn Berger and Bernard C. Nossiter. They were said to be preparing a series of injury, in my judgment, would halt in the series, to proceed be to the system that has worked for 200 years."

Department seeking a voluntary six or seven articles, although one Post editor said privately that there was enough material to be preparing a series of six or seven articles, although one Post editor said privately that there was enough material to be preparing a series of halt in the series, to proceed one Post editor said privately that there was enough material to be preparing a series of halt in the series, to proceed one Post editor said privately that there was enough material to be preparing a series of halt in the series, although one Post editor said privately that there was enough material to be preparing a series of halt in the series, although one Post editor said privately that there was enough material to be preparing a series of halt in the series, to proceed one Post editor said privately that there was enough material to be preparing a series of halt in the series, to proceed one Post editor said privately that there was enough material to be preparing a series of halt in the series, to proceed one Post editor said privately that there was enough material to be preparing a series of halt in the series, to proceed one Post editor said privately that there was enough material to be prepared to b > cision to publish the first article in a series, while The Times was under a temporary order ments, has been reached after extensive discussion.

In a formal statement, he said:

"We carefully examined all the material available to us and concluded that we had an obligation to our readers to publish this story, which contains important information on the history of our involvement in Vietnam and which, in our mation which could be used to The Post was understood to the injury of the United States

prise of some of them-it ap-