

Notes on People James F. Clarity

●
William O. Douglas had less-than-optimistic words for the law students division of the American Bar Association when he dropped in on their dinner in San Francisco. Among the Supreme Court Justice's remarks: "The great struggle of your lifetime is to keep the Bill of Rights alive." . . . At the world level, we are drifting more and more into an authoritarian regime." Justice Douglas, who is 72 years old, said his own generation was "politically bankrupt."
●